THE STAFF SCOOP

Proud To Be . . . Your Interim Executive Director

by Wendy Thomas, Interim Executive Director

For most of my career, I have been aware of the tremendous impact of Tulsa's Jewish community on our nonprofit sector and had at least an inkling of the resources available on the Zarrow Campus. In my role as Executive Director of Leadership Tulsa, I have brought many classes to tour the Sherwin Miller Museum of Jewish Art and Sanditen/Kaiser Holocaust Center. More recently, I had the opportunity to work with Mizel Jewish Community Day School on their strategic plan and host a Joint Board Institute for a variety of Jewish organization lay leaders. But even with all that previous experience, my first days and weeks at the Charles Schusterman Jewish Community Center as Interim Executive Director of the Jewish Federation of Tulsa were ones of wonder and deep appreciation.

In no other place can I imagine interacting with five-year-olds and eighty-five-year-olds within the same walk down the hall. In no other place are we simultaneously caring for precious art objects, precious children, and those pursuing lifelong fitness and learning. In no other place have the volunteers been involved not only for decades, but for generations. I am indeed Proud To Be...your Interim Executive Director.

With a new year, we have made a few minor changes to who is doing what around the campus, and sometimes the things people are doing aren't necessarily obvious based on their titles alone. Below is a list of who you should contact if you have needs or want to interact around program ideas.

- Accounts payable and receivable – Shelly Callahan, jccmembership@jewishtulsa.org
- Annual campaign and legacy giving — Isabella Silberg, isilberg@jewishtulsa.org
- Board member or committee interest – Jared Goldfarb
- Camp Shalom questions and registration – Martha Kelley, mkelley@jewishtulsa.org
- Community calendar additions – Sarah Winkelman, swinkelman@jewishtulsa.org
- Community relations and interfaith programs – Chloe Chappell, cchappell@jewishtulsa.org

PROUD TO BE: A CELEBRATION OF JEWISH IDENTITY AND COMMUNITY

by Yonatan Max Schmidt, Co-chair, Annual Campaign Dinner

In the heart of Tulsa, a profound sense of Jewish identity thrives, nurtured by the resilient spirit of a community that stands tall amidst the challenges of our times. The Jewish Federation of Tulsa (JFT) is at the forefront of celebrating this spirit, embodying the theme "Proud To Be" in every facet of its mission. This sentiment resonates more deeply as we reflect on the recent adversities faced by Jewish communities worldwide. The October 7th massacre has left an indelible mark on our collective memory, a stark reminder of the threats that loom over our existence. Yet, in the face of such trials, our unity and resilience shine brighter, reinforcing our commitment to our heritage and our homeland.

The theme "Proud To Be" is not merely a slogan but a declaration of our unwavering pride in our Jewish, Israeli, and Israeli-American identities. It's a celebration of the diverse ways we live our Judaism—through our traditions, our families, and our contributions to the fabric of our community. In Tulsa, though we may be a small Jewish population, our vibrancy and impact are profound. Our congregations, day school, retirement center, museum, and community initiatives reflect a rich tapestry of Jewish life, a testament to our pride and perseverance.

The upcoming Annual Campaign Dinner on Thursday, April 4 is not just an event; it's a milestone of our collective journey, a moment to honor our achievements and envision our future. Co-chaired by Kate Basch and myself, Yonatan Max Schmidt, this evening promises to be a heartfelt celebration of what it means to be part of the Tulsa Jewish community. It's an opportunity to reflect on our personal and communal Jewish journeys, and to share stories of growth, service, and survival that define us.

My Jewish pride stems from various sources: the historical and spiritual depth of growing up Jewish in Jerusalem, the honor of serving in the IDF, and the strength found in the solidarity of the Tulsa Jewish community. These experiences, coupled with the values that guide us and the opportunities to give back, shape our identity and our commitment to the future of Judaism and our thriving community.

As we prepare for this special evening, we invite you to join us in reflection and celebration. Consider what makes you proud to be Jewish. Is it the rich history of our people? The unwavering commitment to community and justice? Or perhaps the personal journey of growth and resilience that has defined your path? Whatever your reasons, they contribute to the beauty of our community.

This campaign dinner is more than a fundraising event; it's a declaration of our collective pride and a commitment to nurturing the vibrant Jewish life in Tulsa. It's an invitation to support the initiatives that preserve our heritage, educate future generations, and foster a welcoming, inclusive environment for all who wish to partake in our community.

As we look ahead, let us carry the torch of Jewish pride with dignity and purpose. Let's continue to build upon the foundations laid by those who came before us, ensuring that the flame of Jewish identity burns brightly for generations to come. Together, we can rise above the challenges, united by our shared heritage and the boundless strength it provides.

In anticipation of April 4, we extend a warm invitation to you: come, be part of this celebration, and help us write the next chapter of our proud Jewish story. Your presence, support, and commitment to this important cause are what make our community truly remarkable.

Together, let's continue to foster a space where every Jewish person can proudly say, "This is who I am, and I am proud to be a part of this enduring legacy." ■

EXHIBITIONS

Curator's Curios | January 11—December 31

This is the first of many exciting exhibits on view at the Museum this new year. Digging deep into the Museum's collection, curator Sofia Thornblad displays her all-time favorites from oil paintings by Theodore Fried to fun vintage prints. This exhibit offers up a bit of everything.

This project is supported in part by the National Endowment for the Arts.

Old Country to the Plains: Kosher Pop SK8 Art | February 8 – June 14

New York City artist Steve Marcus created 40 new works specifically for The Sherwin Miller Museum of Jewish Art. Marcus' unique style, inspired by cartoons and underground comics, explores the themes of tradition, spirituality and local Jewish history in a fun and refreshingly accessible approach to contemporary Jewish art, masterfully showcased on whimsical and thought-provoking skateboard decks.

17th Annual Purim Mask Student Exhibit | March 7 – May 16

This annual student exhibit features Oklahoma K-12 student artwork, depicting the masks of Purim, commemorating the day the Jewish people were saved by Queen Esther of Persia. The king's advisor, Haman, attempted to execute the Jewish people. Esther, who previously hid her Jewish heritage, bravely revealed her true identity to the king and asked him to save the Jewish people. During Purim, the custom is to dress up and mask one's identity—like Esther did—celebrate with costumes, noisemakers, and parties.

Jacob's Ladder | March 28 – December 31

The Museum archives is home to many imaginative winged beings. Join us on a trip up Jacob's Ladder and encounter these artistic angelic pieces from our collection.

TWO ARE HONORED AT THE SHERWIN MILLER MUSEUM OF JEWISH ART

by Tracey Herst-Woods, Deputy Director, The Sherwin Miller Museum of Jewish Art

Katharine Penson Miller was a longtime member, donor, and friend of The Sherwin Miller Museum of Jewish Art. She was also the widow of the Museum's namesake, Sherwin Miller. After Sherwin's death in 1998, Katharine fulfilled his dream of having a permanent home in Tulsa, OK, honoring her husband's love of Jewish Art. And upon her death she ensured through legacy giving the future of the SMMJA. It was her dream to have a gallery in the Museum concentrated on Fine Art. Through her generous donation, The Sherwin Miller Museum of Jewish Art now has an exhibit space in her name. The board of The Sherwin Miller Museum of Jewish Art has officially named in her honor the Katharine Penson Miller Fine Art Gallery. You can see this space after you walk through the Sharna Newman Frank Education Gallery into the Museum. This gallery currently is showcasing Curator's Curios through the end of the year. This exhibit features Chief Curator, Sofia Thornblad's, favorite pieces from the Museum's permanent collection. ■

Sherwin Miller and Katharine Penson Miller

Charles A. Taylor was an icon in the Oklahoma museum world and we at The Sherwin Miller Museum of Jewish Art had the privilege to know and work with him for more than 20 years. He was the Preparator by title but that didn't encompass all that he accomplished. He performed and supervised all the duties involving the handling of the Museum's art, objects, archives, works on paper and more for a variety of purposes including exhibitions, research, and teaching. The Sherwin Miller Museum of Jewish Art shined bright because of his extensive knowledge. Charles was a jack of all trades. If he didn't know how to do it, he either would educate himself or he would find someone who could educate him. Through all his hard work over the years and leadership changes, his dedication to the Museum never wavered and his craftsmanship was unmatched! When he passed away in September of last year, The Museum staff and board knew we wanted to be able to honor him. The Museum hosted a celebration of Life service shortly after his passing which was attended by his family and friends from near and far. After that it was clear what we needed to do. The Museum board voted last month, and the Museum's collection room is now the Charles A. Taylor Collection Room. The hope is when people see his name displayed it gives them a smile. ■

HAVING DIFFICULT CONVERSATIONS WITH CHILDREN

by Amanda Anderson, Executive Director, Mizel Jewish Community Day School

Discussing challenging subjects with children, such as war, requires a thoughtful and age-appropriate approach. When teaching about the war in Israel or any historical event, it's crucial to consider the child's age, maturity level, and ability to process complex information. Here are some general guidelines for discussing the hostages in Israel with children:

1. Emphasize empathy and humanize the stories of hostages.
2. Acknowledge and discuss their feelings about the situation.
3. Highlight the importance of remembering and honoring the hostages.
4. Share acts of compassion and bravery during the crisis.
5. Connect the discussion to values like courage and unity.
6. Introduce age-appropriate concepts of diplomacy and conflict resolution.
7. Encourage questions, reflections, and open communication.
8. Use clear and simple language tailored to the child's age.
9. Reassure children and provide support, adjusting the conversation as needed.

Mizel JCDS has created a collaborative project with the other Jewish institutions of Tulsa to help honor and remember the current situation in Israel. We are partnering with PJ Library, Temple Israel, and Congregation B'nai Emunah. As a school, we will focus on 1/4 of the names, and our students will research and learn about the hostages. They will create bracelets bearing the names of those who are captured. This will help students to honor and bring awareness and advocacy to the current situation. With this partnership, it can bring our children together, creating a sense of unity and shared remembrance, while tackling difficult conversations with the future generation. ■

ADL AND JEWISH AGENCY PARTNER ON NEW SHLICHIM ANTISEMITISM TRAINING

by Sandy Sloan, Director of Marketing and Communications; Editor TJR

For the first time ever, the Jewish Agency for Israel is partnering with the Anti-Defamation League to train its 350 Israel emissaries (shlichim) serving North America to combat antisemitism.

The new training program was announced at a recent conference of shlichim in Stamford, Connecticut. The conference was the first gathering since the October 7 attacks, which affected many shlichim personally. Tulsa schaliach, Shahaf Feinkuchen, attended the conference. “The long-awaited conference was a very powerful and inspiring experience for me, professionally and personally. Each shlichim is working and living in their separate unique community, and suddenly meeting peers and hearing different but similar stories gave me proportion and affirmation. Hearing about their way of dealing with the current situation was comforting and created a family-like atmosphere. We held a memory ceremony for the victims, and some shlichim shared about their loved ones who died—it was moving and powerful,” stated Shahaf.

ADL staff will train current as well as future shlichim on antisemitism in the U.S.—what it looks like and how to combat it. This knowledge will help shlichim go back to their local communities with the tools to help others. “Our shlichim are helping young American Jews be proud of their identities and feel a unique bond with Israel, and we are proud to partner with the world’s leading anti-hate organization to do everything we can to further those objectives,” stated Jewish Agency for Israel Chairman of the Executive Doron Almog.

Jonathan Greenblatt, ADL CEO, added, “We’re grateful to be partnering with the Jewish Agency, the largest Jewish organization in the world, to equip their incredible emissaries from Israel with all the tools they need to combat antisemitism as they are working with U.S. Jewish communities.”

“Hearing from ADL’s CEO was strengthening,” Shahaf said. “In these hard times people and organizations coming together and creating new projects fighting for our mutual cause gives me hope.”

The training sessions will take place in seven regions: Cleveland, Florida, New Jersey, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., Los Angeles, and Chicago.. ■

JEWISH HATE HIGHLIGHTED AT SUPER BOWL LVIII

Since the start of the Israel/Hamas conflict, the rise in antisemitism has been unprecedented—in the United States and around the globe. The increase in Jewish hate is so alarming, it prompted Robert Kraft, the owner of the New England Patriots, to fund a 30-second commercial that aired during the Super Bowl. Kraft’s Foundation to Combat Antisemitism, is a continuation of the organization’s #StandUpToJewishHate campaign that kicked off in 2022 after several high-profile incidents including antisemitic comments from musician Kanye West. The goal of the estimated $7 million Super Bowl ad was to reach a non-Jewish audience with a message of empathy and action. The Super Bowl continuously draws the largest television audience in the U.S. each year. Join the online movement to fight antisemitism at StandUpToJewishHate.org.

WILLIAM “BILL” ELSON – A LEGACY OF CARING

by Brina Reinstein

Throughout the history of the Jewish people, the religious mandate of tikkun olam, to repair the world has been a unique characteristic of our culture. Our children are taught to embrace the concept of tzedakah through the examples of their parents and grandparents.

Throughout his life Bill Elson had an unwavering commitment to the Jewish people. He was a true tzadik, he gave generously to Israel, local and national Jewish causes, and to the Jewish Federation of Tulsa. Bill had a heartfelt commitment to nurturing his own community and aiding those in need.

He was an active participant in raising funds for the Jewish Federation of Tulsa and was one of its major annual campaign donors. He truly loved Israel and always wanted to ensure that a significant percentage of his dollars went to Israel. His beliefs were rooted in the value of Kol Yisrael Arevim Zeh Bazeh, each member of the Jewish community is responsible for one another.

Bill especially loved to travel to Israel and made numerous trips there. In my capacity as Campaign Director for the Jewish Federation of Tulsa, I had the pleasure to travel to Israel with Bill on a United Jewish Appeal mission. It was on this trip that I really got to know him. We shared our love of Israel and our hopes for the future of Jewish life—around the world and, especially in Tulsa.

Our conversations and special friendship continued when every few months we would meet for lunch at the Summit Club. We discussed the current situations in Israel, declining campaign dollars and the increasing needs of our Tulsa community. He was concerned that Israel’s share was diminishing each year. He was concerned about the younger generation and its support of Israel.

So, began our discussions of his leaving a legacy gift to the Jewish Federation of Tulsa Foundation.

I explained that through a legacy gift, he would be able to continue supporting the critical needs of both Israel and the Tulsa Jewish community, posthumously. I shared with him that creating a charitable remainder trust would make this idea become a reality. By establishing a fund with the Jewish Federation of Tulsa Foundation his desire to support meaningful causes, both here in Tulsa and Israel, would continue after his death. Bill’s legacy gift would allow his voice to be heard even after his death.

Bill passed away in May of 2016. His legacy gift came to the Jewish Federation of Tulsa in 2023 upon the death of his wife Marion. As was his intent, Bill’s name will live on through his legacy gift, supporting the Tulsa Jewish community, and the State of Israel, through a Perpetual Annual Campaign Endowment. As with all legacy gifts, his will have a deep and lasting impact.

Bill’s memory lives on.

THE BURT AND THE BEES©

by Phil Goldfarb

Ingram Berg Shavitz, professionally known as Burt Shavitz was born on May 15, 1935 in Manhattan, NY to a Jewish family with deep roots in Latvia and Lithuania. His father, Edward Shavitz (1903-1989) was an executive with a paper finishing business, and his mother was Nathalie Berg Shavitz (1909-1997). Ingram was raised in Great Neck, New York, and changed his name in 1953 to Burt when he finished high school. He spent time in the Army, serving in Germany and later while living in Manhattan he took photographs, including those of African American Muslim rallies and Bowery drug-dealers, that appeared in Time and Life magazines before leaving the city.

After his brief stint as a photographer, Shavitz eventually settled in Maine and discovered beekeeping as a source of income. Burt encountered a swarm of bees on a fence post six months after learning about beekeeping and the swarm became his first hive. He then began his celebrated eccentric lifestyle as a hippie who made his livelihood selling honey.

Wild-bearded and free spirited, Shavitz was the real-deal namesake of Burt's Bees. Known in his Maine neighborhood as "The Bee Man." Burt lived very simply in a tiny home before it was cool. His greatest treasures weren't the things he owned—they were his golden retrievers, sunsets, and the forest right outside his door. That's why he was able to live happily in a 300-square-foot turkey coop-turned-cabin without electricity or running water. For Burt, living a low-key existence meant selling his honey on the side of the road in Maine just to break even. He became recognizable in town for his signature yellow truck and white beard and developed a steady stream of customers.

Shavitz was making a living by selling honey when his life was altered by a chance encounter with a hitchhiking Roxanne Quimby. She was a single mother and a back-to-the-lander who impressed Shavitz with her ingenuity and self-sufficiency. In the early 1980s, she began making products from his beeswax and would sell their wax candles at local fairs and they became partners. In the first year, the pair made around $20,000 from their products. Not one to waste, he collected the beeswax from his honey-making and eventually the company expanded into making not just candles, but lotions, the iconic lip balms, soaps, and a range of bath products, with Shavitz' image as a key feature of the product labels.

An increase in sales and production led to them launching Burt's Bees in 1984. As the partnership and business grew, Quimby moved the operations to North Carolina in 1994. Soon thereafter, the partnership between Shavitz and Quimby waned, leading to Quimby buying out Shavitz's stake in the company, but they continued to use Burt's face on the products and he continued to make public appearances on behalf of the company. The company constantly expanded, but Shavitz moved back to Maine, where, after separating from the business end of Burt's Bees, he returned to a reclusive, minimalist lifestyle. He later said that he was forced out after having an affair with an employee.

Shavitz received an undisclosed monetary settlement and 37 acres in a remote corner of Maine but would still make appearances on behalf of the company. In 2007, Clorox purchased Burt's Bees for $925 million dollars and the products are now sold in 40 countries.

In recent years before he died, Shavitz lived in a cluttered house, still with no running water. The converted turkey coop that used to be his home remained on his property and he continued to enjoy passing the time by watching wildlife.

A documentary film, Burt's Buzz, was released in 2014. The film, a humorous, authentic, and compelling documentary, discussed the life of Shavitz, his history with Burt's Bees, and his later activities as a reclusive beekeeper who reluctantly became a businessman and whose image is one of the most recognizable brand identities in the world.

Shavitz died on July 5, 2015, at the age of 80 in Bangor, Maine, from respiratory problems. He resided in Parkman, Maine and was cremated.

After his death, the company that he started, relocated Burt's cabin from Maine to their Durham, NC headquarters to serve as a reminder to all who work at Burt's Bees and to all who visit their campus, about the company's roots in the simplicity of nature. ■

TEMPLE ISRAEL'S SCHOLAR IN RESIDENCE WEEKEND— MARCH 15-17, 2024 DISCOVERING MUSSAR: NAVIGATING UNCERTAINTY IN TODAY'S JEWISH WORLD

By Rabbi Michael Weinstein

In these uncertain times, the Jewish community is seeking a solid foundation in core values. Mussar teachings, integral to our Jewish heritage since biblical times, have resurfaced as a relevant and authentic spiritual practice. Originally a concept in the Hebrew Bible, Mussar evolved into a 19th-century European Movement, now experiencing a revival.

Amidst a world in upheaval, Mussar stands as a beacon, inviting individuals to embark on a transformative journey towards self-discovery and resilience. Through its application, we can find inspiration and grounding needed to navigate the uncertainties of our time, fostering purpose within the Jewish community.

Exploring Mussar as a contemporary Jewish spiritual path, we find it offers guidance and stability amid life's complexities. In the face of today's challenges, Mussar provides a lens to navigate uncertainty, fostering personal growth and a deeper connection to our Jewish identity.

The weekend of March 15-17 will be Temple Israel's annual Scholar in Residence weekend. This year we welcome Rabbi Eric Gurvis to Tulsa. Rabbi Gurvis, a SUNY-Albany graduate, was ordained at Hebrew Union College- Jewish Institute of Religion; he has served congregations in New York City, Jackson, MS, Teaneck, NJ, Newton, MA, and Ashland, MA. Rabbi Gurvis trained as a Mussar Facilitator with The Mussar Institute; he now serves on faculty with The Institute as Director of Chaverim and Engagement. and facilitates Mussar groups across Massachusetts.

We are honored to have Rabbi Gurvis as our scholar and teacher for four exciting moments of learning throughout the weekend:

FRIDAY NIGHT, March 15, 6:00pm:

Finding the "Jewish Road to Character" – A Path and a Discipline for our Complicated Times.

What is Mussar? Why hadn't most people heard much about this part of Jewish tradition until recent years? Why should it be a part of our lives in the 21st century? How can it ground me in my life, my relationships, and in the world I live in?

SHABBAT MORNING, March 16, 10:30am:

Studying Torah Through a Mussar Lens

Rabbi Gurvis, a contributor to the 2019 publication, The Mussar Torah Commentary, and leader of The Mussar Institute's weekly offering on Torah From Mussar Perspective (now in its fourth year), will lead us in a discussion of how Mussar tradition provides an additional, and little known lens through which to study this week's parshah, Parshat Pekudei, which closes out the book of Leviticus.

HAVDALAH, Saturday, March 16, 5:30pm:

DAVAR ACHER: Mussar in the World and Culture Around Us

The Middot/Soul traits (or Virtues) which comprise the "Mussar curriculum" are not uniquely Jewish values. Rather, they are universal, though our Mussar inheritance, the teachings about these middot come to us largely through our vast Jewish heritage.

As he has continued his journey into and through Mussar over the past dozen plus years, our guest has noted that Mussar themes can be found all around us – on the big screen, as well as the smaller ones in our homes, in music, art, and literature. In essence, as these are eternal human challenges, the human soul has sought to wrestle with these challenges down through the ages. In this session we will think together about where we see these themes in our culture. The session will include some video clips and musical examples!

SUNDAY MORNING, March 17, 10:00am (Breakfast begins at 9:30am):

Using the Tools of Mussar When We are Having Difficult Conversations

We are living in a time when divisions are all around us. Politics, culture, societal tensions, and global strife have so many of us unable to hold conversations, even with family and friends, we find ourselves side-stepping conversation or even losing relationships with people in our lives.

Temple Israel's Scholar in Residence events are open to everyone in the community and are free of charge. We ask that you rsvp, specifying which events you plan to attend, to rsvp@templetulsa.com. ■
